

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

ACCIDENTS.

The list of fatal and serious non fatal accidents reported to this department for the year 1905, and the comment made upon the same in the annual report of this department for that year, awakened the legislature to the necessity of enacting an employers liability law. For twenty years, to my certain knowledge, and doubtless for a much longer period, efforts to enact a law of like character had met with disheartening failure. Were the great body of employes engaged in dangerous or hazardous work a race of criminal serfs, the non action of legislative bodies and the almost brutal but necessary frankness of judicial decisions directed against the appeal of the injured for legal redress, could not have been surpassed.

In the Bresmer case 97 Pa. 103 Mr. Justice Mercur said: "A servant assumes the risk naturally and reasonably incident to his employment. He is not bound to risk his safety in the service of his master, and may, if he thinks fit, decline any service in which he reasonably apprehends injury to himself." The rule thus laid down by Mr. Justice Mercur is sustained by many judicial decisions rendered in Pennsylvania, and it is practically on all fours with Whaton on Negligence Section 217, Hayden vs. Smithville Mfg. Co. 29 Conn. 548, and Mad River & Lake Erie R. R. Co. vs. Barber 5th Ohio State reports 541. Indeed the same rule has been laid down from the Queen's bench, of old England, to the Supreme courts of New England. Though not so ancient as the feudal law which affected the relations of Ceorl and Villein, nor as just and wholesome as the Canon Law the Civil Law and the Natural Law which respects the person of the servant, the rule is adamant. Nothing can bend or break it but an act of the legislature.

Nevertheless this rule is based upon an assumption so false that were not its effects so tragical it would be ludicrous. To assume that men and women depending absolutely for subsistence upon the labor of their hands (of which class is the greater body of employes or servants so called) can choose their employments and the time and manner of their employments with nice precision, is to assume a liberty of action that never has been known in the tide of time.

True there is neither common law nor statute law to compel any one to labor in the hazardous employments of railroading, mining, the making of iron, nitro glycerine, or in any one of the many other hazardous pursuits of life. And to this extent no more has man or woman laborer that benign and beneficent freedom from coercion so placidly laid down from the non hazardous legal bench. But there is a law, a higher law, a law as relentless as death, a law as remorseless as the famished tiger, a law whose constitutionality can not be questioned before any tribunal, and this is the law of necessity. This law has in all ages rigidly determined the exact and narrow bounds of the liberty of action of those who must eat their bread in the sweat of their faces. This is the law that tells the brakemen that if they do not wish to assume the risk of almost certain death by performing their duties when the engineer of the train has not slept for two days and nights, they may quit work and starve. This is the law that tells the shipwrecked sailor that, if he is not willing to go down with the ship, he has the liberty of jumping into the sea. This is the law that tells the man and woman grown old in a certain avocation to cease their labors and lose their wages or remain and lose life or limbs.

Now if this condition, and it could be more strongly painted and with lifelike trueness, denotes real liberty of action upon the part of employes, the rule laid down by the courts is just and equitable. If however, this condition denotes a mere mockery of liberty, a phantom freedom of action, the ruling of the courts is unjust, inequitable and illogical. That the legislature has at last arrived at this latter conclusion, the following act approved June 10, 1907 would appear to indicate.

"Section 1. Be it enacted, etc. That in all actions brought to recover from an employer for injury suffered by his employe, the negligence of a fellow-servant of the employe shall not be a defense where the injury was caused or contributed to by any of the following causes; namely,

Any defect in the works, plant or machinery of which the employer could have had knowledge by the exercise of ordinary care; the neglect of any person engaged as superintendent, manager, foreman or any other person in charge or control of the works, plant or machinery; the negligence of any person in charge of or directing the particular work in which the employe was engaged at the time of the injury or death; the negligence of any person to whose orders the employe was bound to conform, and did conform, and by reason of his having conformed thereto, the injury or death resulted; the act of any fellow-servant, done in obedience to the rules, instructions, or orders given by the employer or any other person who has authority to direct the doing of said act.

Section 2. The manager, superintendent, foreman or other person in charge or control of the works or any part of the works, shall, under this act be held as the agent of the employer, in all suits for damages for death or injury suffered by employes.

Section 3. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed."

A critical examination of this act will lead to the discovery that it nowhere protects the employe except in the one particular, that the negligence of a fellow servant shall not be a defence in an action for damages brought against the employer by an injured employe. But suppose an injury should happen to an employe through what might be alleged as the negligence of the employer, and where the negligence of a fellow servant would not be a factor, would a defect in the works, plant, or machinery entitle to damages an employe injured while in the discharge of his duties in or about such "works, plant or machinery?" The decisions of our courts of law upon this branch of the subject are anything but favorable to the employee. In the case of the Mansfield Coal & Coke Co. vs. Mc Enery 91 Pa. 185 Mr. Justice Paxson declared "There is no conflict of authority that where an employe has knowledge of machinery being defective and dangerous and in the course of his employment continues to use it without notifying his employer of such defect, and asking him to repair, he voluntarily accepts the risk and cannot in case of injury from such cause, recover."

In a more recent case, that of the New York Lake Erie and Western R. R. Co. vs. Lyons 119 Pa. 324 &c. the same learned judge on the same question, said "The above rule is not only settled law, but is founded on justice and good sense." Whatever of "justice and good sense" lie concealed in this rule must be found in that part of it which imposes an obligation on the part of employes to notify their employers of the dangerous character of the machinery, tools or other appliances in use. There are occasions of course, where the employe is in a better position to judge of the condition of the machinery, tools and other appliances than his employer. It is no unjust burden, in such cases, upon the employe, to obligate him to notify his employer of any and all dangerous defects. But suppose the employe informs his employer of the dangerous character of the machinery in use? Suppose he tells him that the set screws on the shafting should be covered or counter sunk, or that the circular saw should have a hood covering? Suppose he should point out to him the danger incident to working about such unprotected parts of the machinery? would he not then have lived up to the rule laid down by Mr. Justice Paxson, and should not the employer then be liable in damages to his employe if he failed to provide safety devices and that by reason of his failure his employe was injured? Mr. Justice Green practically answered this question in the negative when, in the case of the Northern Central R. R. Co. vs. Husson, 101 Pa., 1, 7 he laid down the following rule "It by no means follows that because of an accident to such an employe while performing his duty the employer is liable simply for the reason that the particular accident might have been prevented by some special device or precaution not in common use." A stronger case, however, is that of Augerstein vs. Jones reported in 139 Pa. page 183. An emory wheel having burst and injured an employe, the judge of the lower court instructed the jury that, if the accident could have been prevented by the adoption of a device which was not adopted, the employer was negligent. This case having been taken to the Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Green declared that "the instructions given to the jury in the court below were erroneous; that it was not incumbent upon the defendant employer to provide such machinery as would either insure the plaintiff employe against injury, or be of the very best and newest device attainable, and that the defendant employer was only bound in duty to provide ordinary machinery such as was reasonably safe for the work to be done." In the light of these two drastic decisions against employes seeking to recover damages, what becomes of that rule laid down by Mr. Justice Paxson, and which he declared to be founded on "justice and common sense?" Is not the employe still luxuriating in that judicially established "liberty" laid down in the rule of Mr. Justice Mercur, wherein it is substantially declared that, if he does not like his job he can quit and take his chances with a world of idlers.

The reports of accidents to employes made to this department for the year 1907 will be found in tabulated form on another page of this report. Many of these accidents were trifling, and many of them were the result of culpable negligence on the part of the injured. There were others, though, and quite a number of them, too, which were very serious, and some that were fatal. Many of these accidents could have been prevented had the employers been as wise to the Golden Rule as they are to the rules laid down by the courts.

BOILER INSPECTIONS.

In conformity with Section 19 of the Act of May 2nd, 1905, there were Eleven Thousand and Thirty Three boilers inspected.

While this number by no means includes all the boilers that should have been inspected, it shows a gratifying increase. The increase over the returns of inspections for the year 1906, is Six Thousand One Hundred and Ninety Three.

There were two boiler explosions reported during the year. The department files show that inspections had been made of these boilers, as required by law, and that both boilers were reported in good condition.

Inspections of boilers will not prevent explosions and consequent injury to persons and property if the men in charge of boilers neglect their duties. In both cases of boiler accidents reported, the indications point strongly if not conclusively to low water followed by the dangerous attempt to inject a fresh supply of cold water upon a heated surface.

THE EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN.

The percentage of children employed in a total of over one million employes of all kinds, is but four per cent. The percentage of children illegally employed is two and three quarter per cent. in the total of children employed. Since the year 1903, there has been a decrease in the percentage of children employed in the total of all employed of nearly two and one half per cent., and a reduction of three and one half in the percentage of children illegally employed. During the year 1905 there was an apparent increase in the number of children illegally employed. The increase was five and one half per cent., an increase which, on the face of the returns, would show an economic condition anything but flattering to the work of this department, to the parents of children and to the employers.

Fortunately the increased percentage was more seeming than real and can be attributed to a change in the laws regulating the employment of children. Prior to June 1905 the law permitted the employment of children when they had attained their thirteenth year, provided they could obtain a prescribed form of affidavit. The law, too, made particular mention of those industries, employment in which was forbidden to children under the age of thirteen years.

By the Act of May 2nd, 1905 an employment certificate for children to be issued under new and greater restrictions, made obsolete the old form of affidavits. By the same act, the age limit was increased from thirteen to fourteen years. These two changes in the law led to the not unexpected discovery that, several thousands of children were employed under forms and conditions lawful under former acts, but unlawful at the times when the deputy factory inspectors made their inspections.

The Act of May 2, 1905 prohibited the employment of children under the age of fourteen years not in certain specified industries as did former acts, but in any and all industrial establishments. As per the decisions of our courts of law, industries in legislation of this character, not specifically included within this prohibition, are excluded, parents and employers had taken advantage of the legal aspect of the prohibition. As a natural sequence the deputy factory inspectors working in an industrial field enlarged by the new law found many children illegally employed, but who, nevertheless, had sought and obtained employment under former restrictions without having violated any law. As these children were at least technically employed contrary to the provisions of the Act of May 2, 1905, they were summarily dismissed, and the dismissal reported to me by the deputy factory inspectors. Hence the apparent increase in the number of children illegally employed during some portion of the year 1905.

The annual returns made to this department show a general tendency to observe the laws regulating the employment of children. I have made an earnest effort to obtain the best possible data bearing upon this question. I am convinced that the inspections were as a rule made along industrial lines that would insure the discovery of the greatest number of children employees. It is a well known fact that there are almost countless business establishments neither in nor about which children are employed. To inspect such establishments, though it would greatly add to the number of employees, and the number of places inspected, would not, by any means, accomplish or tend to accomplish the purpose the laws intend. Results thus obtained would reduce the percentage of children to the total of all employees, but the figures however flattering, would be perniciously misleading. The returns for 1907 show inspections made of over thirteen thousand industrial establishments in which were employed over one million of wage earners. Included in this number there were forty-two thousand children. These returns are based upon visits made to those establishments only in which there was a possibility that children were employed.

By a change of method a far greater number of establishments could have been inspected in which are many thousands of employes, but in which the number of children employes would not amount to one per cent. The exhibit showing the various lines of industry in which children are employed in the greatest numbers and the percentages of children to the total of all employes is made a part of this report. The exhibit is more complete and comprehensive than any that has come under my observation, whether compiled by the federal or by any state department. For those who are so apt to criticise child labor conditions in this Commonwealth by making invidious comparisons with the conditions reported from other states, the exhibit may teach a salutary lesson. It is not a difficult matter to draw conclusions on child labor employment that are disparaging to Pennsylvania, if one embarks in the undertaking with a predetermination to decry regardless of facts. As illustrative of this, in my last annual report wherein it was shown that less than five per cent. of employes were children, a disparaging critic exploited in a pamphlet the assertion that a neighboring state had reduced child labor to two per cent. of the total of employes. This criticism was made notwithstanding the fact that the annual reports of the aforesaid state did not show the same lines of industry inspected, did not show any mercantile inspections, but did show inspections of a number of industries in which but few or no children are ever employed under any conditions even when the total of employes in such industries exceed one hundred and sixty thousand. Indeed to one seeking approximately exact information on the relative percentage of children employed in Pennsylvania and any other state, the task would be hopeless, as no two states have their annual reports compiled along the same lines, nor have they similar laws regulating the employment of children. How easily figures can be made to create a false impression, favorable or otherwise, one may judge from the following exposition.

There were in 1907 sixteen hundred and eighty-seven establishments inspected in all of which iron in some form was manufactured. The employes in these establishments numbered four hundred and twenty-six thousand four hundred and twenty-four. But the per cent. of children to total of employes in these establishments is but one and one-third. In the manufacture of plate glass and window glass there were inspected forty-three establishments employing in all twelve thousand four hundred and sixty wage earners. The per cent. of children to all employes in this glass industry is but one-third of one per cent. By adding the employes in the iron and glass industries, and by adding the children in the same industries and dividing the latter addition by the former, the result would show a flattering small percentage of children. This is one extreme. To obtain an opposite extreme it is only necessary to select two other industries, viz, that of the manufacture of hosiery and knit goods, and the manufacture of glass table ware, bottles, lamp chimneys, etc. In the first mentioned of these two industries, there were four hundred and eighteen establishments inspected, in which there were employed twenty thousand four hundred and ninety-five persons, of which number twenty-two per cent. are children. In the second industry mentioned, there were one hundred and forty establishments inspected in which were employed twenty-one thousand one hundred and sixty-five persons, of which number fifteen and one-half per cent. are children. By a process similar to that used in the industries of iron, and plate and window glass manufactories, the mean percentage of children employed in the hosiery and in the glass other than plate and window manufactories would be the reverse of flattering. It was to avoid these misleading extremes that I had compiled, first, the per cent. of children to all employes, second, the per cent. of children to all employes in the eight large grand divisions of industry, third, the per cent. of children in thirty-two selected industries in which children are employed in numbers greater than in any other industries. These percentages and deductions are advanced for the benefit of those who, elected to make laws, should, in all consistency and fairness, be provided with the best possible information. The economist in the legislature will readily comprehend the situation. So also the person who has sense enough to know that he is not versed in the law and logic associated with economics, and who does not attempt the dangerous experiment of expounding matters not within the provision of his studies or intelligence. And it should appeal also to that class of reformers, who judge child labor conditions in general, by what they find in one or two shops of a given industry. As a sample of this last fatuous mental condition, may be mentioned that of the child labor reformers who, finding a large number of children in one shop of a great manufacturing industry, multiplies that number of children by the number of shops in the same industry. To show the fallacy of this method of guessing at the number of children employes, I have but to cite the single instance of the returns of the cigar industry made to this department.

In one county one hundred and eighty-four cigar factories were inspected and of this number but thirty-six factories had any children employed. In one of these factories there were twenty-two children employed. To the mere guesser or surmiser, if there were that number employed in the one factory there would be one hundred and eighty-four times the number in all factories. Or if the guesser or surmiser was more cautious, he would reason that factories are not all of the same proportions, and that seven children to a factory would be a fair average. On this guess he would conclude that there were at least twelve hundred children employes in the cigar factories of the county aforesaid. As a matter of fact a thorough inspection of all the cigar factories in the county would demonstrate that in the whole one hundred and eighty-four there were but ninety-nine children employes.

That the employment of children in violation of law is becoming a thing of the past the following statement will show. In 1903, the first year of my connection with this department, 3,243 illegally employed children were found and dismissed. In 1904 I had the returns for dismissals of illegally employed children made under three headings as follows—For illiteracy; for being under age; and for lack of employment certificates. For 1903 there were no special returns for illiteracy or lack of age qualifications, hence no comparisons can be made for that year, in these two particulars. But in 1904 there were 107 children dismissed for illiteracy, 180 for being under the required age, and 2,956 for lack of employment certificates. The figures and the reasons for the apparent increase in the number of illegally employed children during 1905 have already been explained. In 1906 the illiterates numbered 81, those under age 180, and those without employment certificates 1,378. For the year 1907 the illiterates had dropped to 15, those under age to 151 and those without certificates or affidavits to 987.

The falling off in the number of illegally employed children will be given greater significance when it is considered that the field of inspection has been greatly enlarged since 1903, and that by reason of this ten thousand children employees have been added to the number that came under the supervision of this department. As to the demagogic clamor about child labor in its present aspect in Pennsylvania I may be here permitted to quote approvingly what was said by Herbert Spencer. "When an evil is at its worst, nobody pays any attention to it; when it is waning, the public pricks up its ears, and when it is almost gone, everybody wants to rise up and legislate it out of existence."

EMPLOYMENT OF FEMALES.

The employment of females in nearly all avenues of industry is steadily increasing. Industrial establishments which, two decades past, gave employment to few or no females, now give employment to many thousands.

In the establishments reported inspected for the year 1907, two hundred and twenty-six thousand seven hundred and forty-three females were employed.

If the employees in the iron and steel industries, in which but few females are employed, be deducted from the total of all employees, the ratio of female to male employees in the remaining total of employees for all other industries would be 220,954 females to 386,273 males.

In the two exhibits, 1 and 2, of this report will be found, in tabulated form, the percentages of female employees in the several industries reported to this department. To the economist and sociologist the exhibits should prove instructive. To this department the information obtained from such exhibits is at all times a valuable aid in the enforcement of the laws.

By the terms of Section 3, of the act of May 2nd, 1905, all female employees, regardless of age, are put under the same restrictions as all minors under the age of sixteen years, in the matter of the number of hours in which they can be legally employed by the day and by the week. The right to thus regulate the hours of employment of females arises, it is alleged, from some police power in the State. Just what is meant by the term police power, and what that power includes is something that requires serious consideration. It certainly does not include the power to deprive any person of his or her rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, or by the Constitution of the State, either or both.

That by virtue of this police power the state may regulate the employment of children has been determined by many judicial decisions. I have yet to find, however, a single instance where any court of last resort has upheld the contention that a State through its police power can as in this section lawfully regulate either the number of hours in which an adult female may engage to employ herself, or the particular hour of the day or night when her employment shall begin or cease. In a recent decision—Peoples vs. Williams, Court of Appeals of New York, 81 North Eastern Reporter, page 788 the opinion of Judge Gray, all judges concurring, goes to the very heart of this question.

This opinion, in part, is as follows:

"Under our laws men and women now stand alike in their constitutional rights, and there is no warrant for making any discrimination between them with respect to the liberty of person or of contract. An adult woman is no more to be regarded as a ward of the State, or in any other light than a man is regarded, when the question relates to the business pursuit or calling. She is entitled to enjoy, unmolested, her liberty of person, and her freedom to work for whom she pleases, where she pleases, and as long as she pleases, within the general limits operative on all persons alike."

And, too, as a part of his opinion, Judge Gray makes the following forcible declaration:

"The tendency of legislatures, in the form of regulatory measures, to interfere with the lawful pursuits of citizens, is becoming a marked one in this country, and it behooves the Courts, firmly and fearlessly, to interpose the barrier of their judgments when invoked to protect against legislative acts plainly transcending the powers conferred by the Constitution upon the legislative body."

Is there a good reason for believing that the Supreme Court of this Commonwealth would dissent from this opinion?

INLAND LAKE NAVIGATION.

The reports of inspections of vessels plying upon the inland lakes show that accidents incident to navigation are provided against in the manner directed by law. All officers are licensed, a system of signals established, and all vessels are provided with life preservers, small boats, life lines and rafts. There were no accidents reported during the year.

Workshops known in the vernacular as "Sweat Shops," are now regulated by law on methodical and sensible lines. The old hue and cry against "Sweatshops" in as far as the same related to tenement house work was based upon false premises. It was not the fault of the poor workers that the tenement shops were unsanitary. The fault lay with the owners and agents of owners of tenement houses.

In the report on workshops, 1905, wherein I sought to show the fallacy and unfairness of the attacks persistently made against the poor workers, will be found this comment: "It is a law of nature that all mankind must work if they would live. It is an economic law under present conditions that a large portion of mankind cannot afford sanitary shops or dwellings in which to earn their bread. Landlords, many of them, take advantage of this and by refusing to make the necessary repairs subject the tenants to a censure that should fall upon themselves. What is needed is a tenement house inspection law as humane and drastic as that given to New York City by its former governor, Mr. Roosevelt." This timely comment bore fruit, in the shape of the act to regulate tenement houses in cities of the first class, an act approved June 7th, 1907.

Though the evils complained of were chiefly prevalent in cities of the first class, nevertheless, they existed in other cities. An amendment, therefore, to the aforesaid act extending the provisions thereof to all cities would no doubt prove of great benefit. There is no doubt in my mind that a general tenement house law is needed.

Under present conditions, the tenant bakers are as much at the mercy of tenement house landlords as are the workers in "sweat shops."

LEGISLATION.

The last session of the Legislature passed no act amending the act of May 2nd, 1905, known as the factory law. Three amendments had been suggested by this department the necessity for which was fully explained in the annual report for 1906. The reasons then advanced for a change in the law are as strong today as when set forth in that report. To report them here is, I think, wholly unnecessary.

There will come a time when changes in the so-called factory laws will be made. It may not be amiss here to offer some suggestions relative to such changes. In a study of the factory acts enacted by this and other states, and comparing those several acts with the factory laws enacted in England, the one element most apparent is their crudeness, and inadaptability to the purposes intended.

Whereas in England industrial establishments are classified and grouped, each class or group having its own regulatory provisions as to the employment of children and minors, guarding of plant, machinery, etc., the hours of employment, noon regulations, and sanitation—the regulations in this and other States are of a horizontal and sweeping character. Blast furnaces and glass manufactories are put on the legal plane with millinery stores and cold storage houses. Nitro-Glycerine and powder-making establishments, poisonous match factories, and the deadly cigar factories, and tobacco stripping shops are each and all under the same prohibition and commands as the humbler and safer wheel-wright shops, laundries and petty job printing concerns. In the regulation of mercantile industries there is no distinction made between the large department store and the little corner grocery.

Other examples of like incongruities will readily suggest themselves to one who is conversant with what is generally known as factory laws.

That such incongruities should have been injected into the factory laws of this and other States is what might have been expected. The first State to enact a law regulating the employment of children, hours of labor, sanitary measures, etc., for factories, mercantile and other establishments, doubtless viewed the law as merely tentative. Other States falling into line adopted, with some slight changes, these tentative measures, since which time there has been in each and all of these States some patching and mending of regulatory measures, and all incongruous and ineffective. In the perfecting of her regulations for industrial and other establishments Pennsylvania should enact a law systematic in design and effective in its operation. It should exercise in this matter a due respect for constitutional limitations, a spirit of equity toward invested capital, a wholesome solicitude for the welfare of employes, and all in all, that conservative-radical sense of duty and justice that discriminates between what is demanded by erratic Utopians and what is essentially needed for the common good.

The better to effect this, I suggest a self-constituted committee composed of men representing the iron, glass, textile and mercantile interests; men representing the federation of labor; representatives of the civic clubs; the Superintendent of Public Instruction and the head of this Department.

A committee thus formed could by an amicable and business like exchange of experiences and views arrive at a fair and effective conclusion as to the kind of a bill that should be presented to the Legislature for its action. Such action would insure an almost perfect measure that could be explained to and urged upon a legislative committee without any discordant voice.

Since this report has been in process of being prepared for publication two accidents caused by fire panic have occurred, one in the Boyertown opera house, the other in the Imperial knitting mill at Scranton.

A report of these accidents will come properly within the purview of the report of accidents occurring in 1908. I feel, however, that it is due to this Department to say here and now that neither of these accidents was in anywise owing to neglect of duty upon the part of the deputy factory inspectors.

In both establishments fire escapes had been erected in compliance with orders issued by this Department. In the Boyertown case it required much urging and threat of prosecution. In the Scranton affair, having no jurisdiction in the matter, the city being of the second class, this Department with the support of the city authorities had a fire escape erected upon the knitting mill establishment.

According to the information obtained by me nearly all of those whose lives were saved in either accident owe their safety to the fire escapes.

Those who lost their lives were the persons who, in their pitiable frenzy, jumped off the fire escapes or forgot to seek the protection they afforded.

As a partial insurance against a repetition of such accidents would it not be the part of wisdom to make provisions for larger fire escapes and for a more definite and more extensive jurisdiction of this Department over all means of egress, particularly in industrial establishments, places of amusement and public halls? Section 22 of the Act of May 2nd, 1905, which is supposed to confer jurisdiction upon this Department, gives no power in cities of the first and second classes nor in any other city, town, borough or hamlet except when in such cities, towns, et cetera, the law makes it the duty of the owner, lessee, &c., to erect and maintain proper and sufficient exits. Where is this State law to be found, and where are the ordinances to be found that prescribe for exits except in cities of the first and second classes, in which cities this Department has no jurisdiction over exits?

The jurisdiction now conferred in the matter of exits is on a par with the right granted to the girl to go in swimming provided she did not go near the water.

As another partial insurance against panics raised by fire or the cry of fire, I recommend that in all school rooms above the first floor, and in all large industrial establishments employing persons above the first floor, and in all department stores employing persons above the first floor, that it be made compulsory upon the part of teachers and managers to have fire alarm drills in such manner and at such times as a law general in its scope and provisions shall direct.

And in this connection, I suggest that fire drills shall be had as often as once each month, and that the alarms for said drills shall be made as nearly as possible when least expected and not in such a routine manner as would clearly indicate nothing more than a perfunctory drill. Preconcerted alarms are not alarms, and may do more harm than good.

In closing this report for the year 1907, I wish to extend my sincere thanks to all who by their advice or labor aided me in the performance of my duties.

Respectfully submitted,

J. C. DELANEY,
Chief Factory Inspector.
